The Hoover Institution is influential in the American conservative and libertarian movements. The Institution has long been a place of scholarship for high-profile conservatives with government experience. A number of Hoover Institution fellows had connections to or held positions in the Bush administration

and other

Republican

administrations. High-profile conservatives

Edwin Meese

Condoleezza Rice

George Shultz

Thomas Sowell

Shelby Steele

, and

Amy Zegart

are all Hoover Institution fellows. Retired U.S. Army

gen. John P. Abizaid

, former commander of the U.S. Central Command

, was recently named the Institution's first Annenberg Distinguished Visiting Fellow.
