

More than 390 New York University Law students, students at other NYU schools, NYU faculty and alumni, non-profit and student organizations, intellectuals, experts, and other community members have signed a Statement of No Confidence in Harold H. Koh. The statement condemns NYU Law's hiring of Harold Koh to teach International Human Rights Law in light of his role as a key legal architect of the Obama Administration's drone program, which has claimed thousands of civilian lives across the globe.

On April 20, 2015, the students hosted a Roundtable Discussion titled "Beyond Empire: Drones, Targeted Killing and the Future of Human Rights." The panelists were:
